Founding Faculty — what happens after the dialogue

Issued July 2026 / Given to professors who have completed the dialogue

Introduction

Thank you for your time in the dialogue. This document lays out, without omissions, what happens between here and appointment. You can stop at any point, and doing so carries no disadvantage.

1. The path from here

Send two documents	Email the two items below in any format. About a week is a comfortable pace; later is fine.
Academic review (2–4 weeks)	We review publications, teaching record and COI against academic standards. We contact you only if questions arise.
Terms proposal	You receive a draft agreement covering role, time, compensation, COI and exit. Requests for changes are welcome.
Appointment & announcement	Appointment follows signature. Publication only with your consent; you may wait for a joint announcement.

2. What to prepare (two items only)

CV / publications	A researchmap or ORCID URL is enough. Otherwise a CV in any format. No full list needed; mark five representative works.
A note on your interests	A few lines on which roles or areas interest you. A summary of what you said in the dialogue is fine.

3. What review looks at, and what it does not

- ✓ Publications and teaching record in your field
- ✓ How you engage with evidence
- ✓ Conflicts of interest (having them is not a problem; we look at whether they can be managed)

× Fame or media presence

× Box-office draw

4. What the agreement covers

Role and scope / annual time commitment / compensation standards / co-authorship credit and secondary-use terms for materials / COI disclosure and recusal / conditions for publishing your name / resignation procedure (free; handover only) / exit clause on governance breach

× English ability (not required)

× Age or university prestige

5. Common concerns

“Declining will be awkward”

It will not. You may decline at any stage without giving a reason, and your name is not kept on record.

“I don't want my university to know yet”

Until appointment is confirmed we share nothing externally, and we write only to the address you designate.

“My schedule is unpredictable”

The agreement states time commitment as a floor. Anything beyond it is a separate, case-by-case agreement.
